

Book budgeting for the pastor's library

Suggested book budget for a church with 501-750 members: $175-230 per month

The Pastor's Library surveyed over 1800 pastors and church members about pastor's book budgets. It is important to remember that if your church has more than one pastor, the book budget should reflect an allotment for each pastor to read somewhere between 3 and 6 books per month. With larger congregations, pastor need access to more diverse resources and a wider variety of reading material.

Fast facts about pastoral book budgets:

40% of pastors have a book budget provided by their church for purchasing books, Bible software, and related resources.

89% of surveyed pastors use somewhere between 0-10 books in a typical week prepare for sermons and conduct personal study. Many of these pastors said they would use more books for their studies, but they could not afford more.

61% of surveyed pastors with a book budget say that the books they typically buy are more expensive now than when they started as a pastor.

47% of pastors who do not have a book budget say the main reason is that they pay for books and software out of their own pocket.

Once a pastor has a book budget, they are generally content with the dollar amount they receive:

72% of all pastors with book budgets felt their current book budget met their needs in relation to their experience and role in their church.

Why does my pastor need a book budget?

COST

Given the cost of books and software, many of today's pastors can't afford to purchase the resources they really need. Churches can help pastors meet this need.

STAYING CURRENT

Many of the pastors we surveyed use their book budget for electronic books, Bible software, magazines, journals, popular titles, and reference works. A book budget allows your pastor to access more information, from the newest Christian titles to respected reference works. This allows them to conduct more effective studies and stay current with the needs of their congregation.

EFFICIENCY

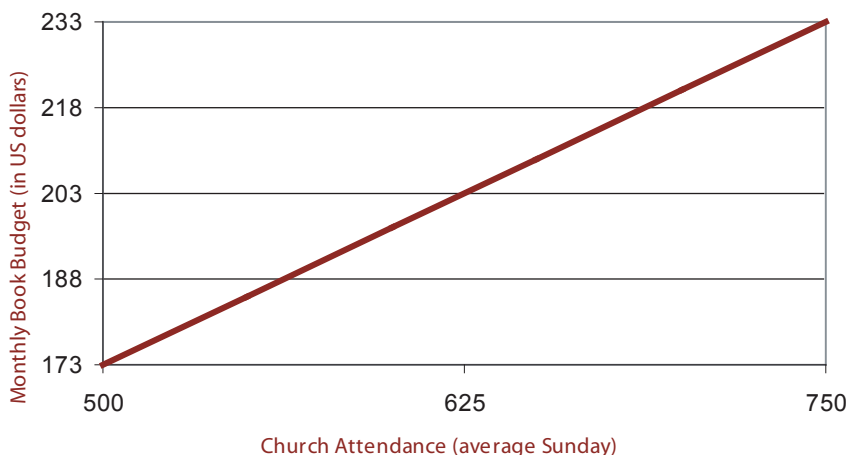

21st century pastors face numerous demands on their time. Having the right resources makes pastors more efficient in their personal study and sermon preparation. Further, today's Bible software puts needed resources just a mouse-click away, saving even more time.

BETTER PREPARATION

Many churches have never considered setting aside a book budget for their pastor's library. The fact is that pastors who have book budgets are able to study and grow more effectively because they have access to the resources they need every day. Setting up a pastor's book budget benefits the whole church community by better preparing the pastor.

More facts and tips for developing your pastor's book budget:

Church Attendance of 501-750

Book budget tips from the experts:

- Evaluating your pastor's book and resource needs helps your church focus its spending on what's important.
- It is important to evaluate the many tools available to pastors and churches today. Churches that spend their book budget wisely reap the benefits of resources that continue to be useful as their congregation changes and develops.
- Book budgets allow churches to plan ahead, making larger purchases more realistic, including investments in Bible software.
- When pastors have adequate book budgets, churches are better equipped to grow as they study the Bible. Developing a pastor's budget may be an easy way to encourage your pastor's Bible studies and will benefit the whole congregation.

For more budgeting tools, visit www.ThePastorsLibrary.com!